UPDATES ON SLO COUNTY ECONOMIC STRATEGY

Christine Rogers
Economic Vitality Corporation

The headlines read "The California Valley Solar Project Breaks Ground". This is undoubtedly newsworthy as one of the largest solar projects underway in the United States to date. But to this San Luis Obispo County resident it means so much more. It brings to mind the early discussions of the Green Energy Team champions as part of the Economic Strategy project as they said in one, cohesive voice to both SunPower and First Solar companies, "How can we help?". The subsequent advocacy effort undertaken by these cluster members was not on behalf of the companies, but on behalf of progress in support of the necessary paradigm shift, in the way we think about our energy resources and their link to our local economy.

NEXT INTENT INVOLVEMENT IN MARS SCIENCE LABORATORY PROJECT FOR NASA/JPL

Rodney Babcock
Next Intent

(The EVC is pleased to highlight one of our co-chairs of the Economic Strategy Project, as part of the Specialized Manufacturing cluster. Rodney Babcock, founder of San Luis Obispo-based Next Intent continues to put our region on the map for the aerospace industry.)

Thanks very much for your inquiry as to our involvement in the recent launch of the Mars Science Laboratory. We are as proud as can be that we have been able to be part of such a great program led by NASA. Next Intent has a number of components on the Rover. Also, our AMS Group Strategic Partner, Tapemation Machining, built the wheels. See photos on following pages which show where the "goods" are located.
